

Elaine has been with the Center for Career and Professional Development at Adelphi University since 2003, overseeing the planning and coordination of numerous career and professional development opportunities for Adelphi University students and alumni.

Elaine's main focus has been on empowering students to clarify their aspirations, promote their unique strengths, and confidently enter the workforce. Having steered many on-campus recruitment programs, job fairs, employer panels and career workshops, she has fostered strong partnerships with faculty, university administrators and employers, with whom she has often collaborated on presentations, programs and events. Through one-to-one counseling, group sessions and online guidance, her meticulous reviews of resumes, cover letters and LinkedIn profiles have elevated the professional portfolios of thousands of students. Elaine has also written and edited a number of career guidebooks, web content and instructional materials, widely used by the student body.

Concurrently working with the Office of Career Preparation and Professional Development at St. Joseph's College in Brooklyn, NY, Elaine holds her Master's degree in Psychology from Adelphi University, and her Bachelor's degree in Communications from St. John's University.
